and, mjuring the harvest in some degree, but the crops were so abundant that there was no fear of anything like scarcity, even should the potato rot, which had also appeared, equal the bight of 1847. In 1856 the population of England, Scotland and Wales was 22,060,449, viz. 10,862,279 males and 11,278,170 females. England and Wales contained 19,045,187 of these, and Scotland 5,035,262. There were 759,201 births, 448,962 deaths, and 179,824 marriages. There were 614,802 legitimate and 42,651 illegitimate births in England and Wales, and In London 83,787 legitimate and 3,046 illegitimate births. The proportion of illegitimate to legitimate was 1 in 14.0 and 1 in 23.0. The proportion of marriages to the population was 1 in 119 in England and Wales, and one in 100 in London, and it is added:—In Great Britain 5,179 schools were inspected in 1866, accommodating 377,762 chitteren; 571,239 was the average number in attendance; 3,456 of these schools belonged to the church, and the rest to the various dissenters (including the Roman Catholies) and the kirk of Scotland; 165 primary schools were built, and 6,262 enlarged or improved in England in 1856. The receipts for the purposes of primary education amounted to £915,372 (£422,633 from Parliamentary grants), and the expenditure to £939,910.

In Ireland there were 5,245 national schools at work at the end of 1866, and the average daily attendanco varied from 269,416 to 254,011. There were 168 agricultural national schools at work in 1856. The receipts on account of primary education amounted to £247,664, and the expenditure to £231,468.

The total number of paupers in the United Kingdom in 1867 was 1,067,133, the per centage to the population being 4-6 in England and Wales, 3-9 in Scotland, and 0-9 in Freland. The total expenditure on the paupers of the United Kingdom was 57,153,742. In England there were, in 1867, 122,845 in 4000 and 762,165 out-d-or paupers, The adult able-bodied paupers (exclusive of agrants or "sturdy beggars") numbered (exclusive of agrants or "stur

the relief of the poor in 1857 was £5,888,756, the average ate per individual of the population having been 8s, 5½4 for "poor rates received," and 6s, 1½4, for expenditure in relief of poor.

Ireland presents a remarkable improvement as regards the decline of pauperism. The total number of paupers in 1857 was only 56,910, against 73,525 in 1855, and 89,619 in 1855. The per centage ratio to the population was only 0.9. The expenditure has fallen off from £849,951, (1855) to £619,514.

Paris possesses sixteen hospitals for the treatment of diseases, and twelve hospices or places of refuge for the incurable or for aged paupers. The support of these different establishments require great recourses, and the account for 1857 gives the ordinary receipts at 16,427,1171, and the expenses at 16,132,114f. During 1857 there were 21,411 patients treated in the different hospitals, and 19,154 supported in the hospices and asylums. All the patients in the above mentioned list did not belong to Paris; the bankeus giving a contingent of 12,427. In addition to the above mentioned list did not belong to Paris; the bankeus giving a contingent of 12,427. In addition to the above number of patients treated gratuitously, there are many who were in private rooms, and who paid during 1857 a sum of 148,274f. There is also another class who receive the aid of the bospitals—the members of the laboring classes, who receive medical and other assistance at their own houses, where they are able to receive the atfention of their families. A sum of 2,995,788f, was expended in this manner during 1857 among 33,301 families. The expense per day of a patient in a hospital costs 2f. 27c. and in a hospice 1f. 47c., which makes the expense of each bed 830f. doc. loc. loc hospital, and 839f. 77c. in a hospital proper, for the arrangements of the Reform bill purposely excluded you. Here you are mixed up with the wretched confusion of European implication that in any year you may have your taxe raised, and the demand for your labor destroyed, in pursuit

The Liverpool Journal, of the 26th ultimo, says:—Most of the eixty-nine lunatics from America, who have been returned, as stated, came to the workhouse in a condition of extreme wreschedness, with hunger stamped upon them. They are represented as from all parts of the United Kingdom, but two of them are put down as from Newfoundland, two as natives of St. Domingo. Most of them are idiots and imbeciles, most of them hopelessly insane, and one cargo is known to have been shipped from a lunatic asplum near Boston, no one being appointed in charge of them. Those who are sensible enough to give an account of themselves will be removed to their own parishes, but there are many who can give no intelligible an account of themselves will be removed to their own parishes, but there are many who can give no intelligible account, and one woman apparently cannot speak at all. The crueity, as well as the injustice of the proceeding, will be at once perceived, from the fact that these poor creatures, in nearly every instance, long since emigrated to the United States, where they have spent the strength and vigor of their days in the omichment of their adopted country, and that it has been there that their frightful malady has been acquired.

A remarkable meeting was held in London on the night of 23d uit. A considerable number of English and French diemocrats assembled together on the invitation of the Central International Committee, to commensorate the exablishment of a Republic, and the overthrow of monarchy in 1792. The hero of the recent State trial, Dr. Simon Bernard, presided, but both he and M. Feinx Pyat, the principal orator of the night, spoke in French, so that the majority of the audience could not understand them. M. Pyat depicted the present state of France in very dark principal orator of the night, spoke in French, so that the majority of the audience could not understand them. M. Pyat depicted the present state of France in very dark rolors. Only one Englishman spoke, Mr. Mackie, who attributed the failure of the first French revolution to the murder of the immortal Robespierre by the middle classes, and expressed his distrust of the leaders of the revolution of '48—Lamartine, Louis Blanc and Ledru Rollin. According to the speaker, Louis Blanc and Ledru Rollin. According to the speaker, Louis Blanc ought to have shot Lamartine, and, as he did not do so, he has forfeited the confidence of all true democrats.

The London Star of the 24th uit, remarks:—The President of the republic is required by that law to send back to Africa all negroes captured as these have been, and Congress has voted a sum of money for the purpose. Mr. Buchanan has given the necessary orders for the Niagaraso recently engaged in connecting Europe and America by the electric wire—to be ordered to Charleston for the purpose. We do not see what else he could do; and, indeed, it is our opinion that not only has the Cabinet of Washington obeyed the strict letter of the law, but the step it has taken must be approved on the broadest ground of policy, supposing it to be really desirous of suppressing the slave trade carried on in American vessels from Africa to Cuba.

The various French railway companies intend to introduce in their service averal impurpation and the capture of the content of the service averal impurpation and the capture of the service averal impurpation and the capture of the cap trade carried on in American vessels from Africa to Cuba. The various French railway companies intend to introduce into their service saveral important ameliorations, which will tend to give to families much additional comfort in first class carriages. Special carriages are to be constructed, composed of saloon, bedroom and ante-room, which may be engaged at a special tariff. A family, composed of five or six persons, may thus undertake the long-cet journey with but little fatigue, and if necessary, take their servants to wait on them.
